

Elementary School Failures Emily Shaffer

I used to always get in trouble during English class in elementary school for my run-on sentences but no matter how much I tried to shorten them or have some sort of variety I always found myself more naturally spewing out ideas in one unpunctuated thought and I attribute that to the obscure and logorrheic nature in which I think though I can understand that might be tedious for some people to read or recite so I'm trying to work on that...